Part III describes situations as temporal units of various layers: internally, as types of situations; and externally, as located relative to the time of speech and grounded in reality or potentiality.

Part IV looks at situations as relational units and their structuring as sentences.

The papers compiled in the present volume aim at investigating the many fruitful manners in which cognitive linguistics can expand further on cognitive translation studies.

Some papers (e.g. Halverson, Mu ñ oz-Mart í n, Mart í n de Le ó n) take a theoretical stand, since the epistemological and
