In Greek mythology, crossroads were associated with both Hermes and Hecate, with shrines and ceremonies for both taking place there.The herm pillar associated with Hermes frequently marked these places due to the god's association with travelers and role as a guide. Though less central to Greek mythology than Hermes, Hecate's connection to crossroads was more cemented in ritual.

When The God Who Hung on the Cross was published in 2003, readers all over the world resonated with its powerful stories of hope and faith. They said the book challenged them to trust God more and to climb out of their spiritual status quo. Seeing God at work in some of the world’s most unlikely places expanded their vision of what God could do in their own lives. They wanted a sequel. Now, Janice Rosser Allen and Ellen Vaughn have written a compelling follow-up book that takes readers to new, exotic locations, wild adventures, and a vivid, fresh understanding of God’s power. You’ll meet courageous men and women whose faith is flourishing in the face of ISIS and other terrorists. You’ll weep at believers’ suffering and losses, and laugh at the creative audacity of indigenous church planters who just won’t take no for an answer, whether in the Language is the species-specific human version of the animal system of communication. In contrast to non-human animals, language enables humans to invent a plurality of possible worlds; reflect upon signs; be responsible for our actions; gain conscious awareness of our inevitable mutual involvement in the network of life on this planet; and be responsibly involved in the destiny of the planet. The author looks at semiotics, the study of signs, symbols, and communication as developing sequentially rather than successively, more synchronically than diachronically. She discusses the contemporary phenomenon that people in today’s society have witnessed and participated in, as part of the development of semiotics. Although there is a long history preceding semiotics, in a sense the field is, as a phenomenon, more “of our time” than of any time past. Its leading figures, whom Pettrilli examines, belong to the twentieth and twenty-first century. Semiotics is associated with a capacity for listening. This capacity is also the condition for reconnecting to and recovering the ancient vocation of semiotics as that branch of medical science relating to the interpretation of signs or symptoms. The pragmatic aspect of global semiotics studies the impact of language or signs on those who use them, and looks for consequences in actual practice. In this respect, Pettrilli theorizes that the task for semiotics in the era of globalization is nothing less than to take responsibility for life in its totality.

Is Western civilization in an accelerating decline? And if it continues will it eventually weaken and cause us to come to the end of cultured civilization as we now know it? "Yes," says David Jeremiah, and in his book, I NEVER THOUGHT I'D SEE THE DAY! he details numerous signs of this cultural decay including: America held hostage by Iran Marriage becoming obsolete Creeping socialism The invisibility of culture's enemies Increase in "spiritual warfare" America turning its back on Israel Atheist attack on religion Can this downward spiral be reversed? Yes, but only if one person at a time returns to God with our heart, our manner of life, our dedication to genuine worship of God, in serving God by helping others, in our giving, and in prayer.
