This book argues that there are deep connections between "poetic" thinking and the sensitive recognition of creaturely others. It explores this proposition in relation to four poets: Marianne Moore, Elizabeth Bishop, Ted Hughes, and Les Murray. Through a series of close readings,

Where To Download

and by paying close attention to issues of sound, rhythm, simile, metaphor, and image, it explores how poetry cultivates a special openness towards animal others. The thinking behind this book is inspired by J. M. Coetzee's The Lives of Animals. In particular, it takes up that book's suggestion that poetry invites us to relate to animals in an open-ended and sympathetic manner. Poets, according to Elizabeth Costello, the book's protagonist, "return the living, electric being to language", and, doing so, compel us to open our hearts towards animals and the claims they make upon us.

There are special

affinities, for her,
between the music of
poetry and the recognition of others.
But what might it mean
to say that poets to return life to language?
And why might this
have any bearing on our relationship with animals? Beyond
offering many suggestive starting
points, Elizabeth

Costello says very little about the nature of poetry's special relationship with the animal; one aim of this study, then, is to ask of what this relationship consists, not least by examining the various ways poets have bodied forth animals in language.

concept and highlights its promises and challenges. Using a Transformative Action Research design, six empirically grounded ethnographic case studies describe how translanguaging is used in lesson designs and in the spontaneous moves made by teachers and students during specific teaching moments. The the implications for writing pedagogy. It conceptualises writers' identities, and draws upon empirical studies to explore their construction, enactment and performance.

Focusing largely on teachers' identities and practices as writers and the writer identities of primary and secondary students, it also
