Excerpt from Letters of the Rev. Dr. Beecher and Rev. Mr. Nettleton, on the "New Measures" In Conducting Revivals of Religion: With a Review of a Sermon In this aspect of the subject, the parity of religion is as important as religion itself; and for this valid reason, genuine religion is, strictly speaking, the only religion. So thought the apostle, when he wrote on this topic to the Galatian church, in respect to the influence of certain innovators, who, on pretence of improving the religion of Christ, were really adulterating and destroying it. Nathaniel Taylor was arguably the most influential and the most frequently misrepresented American theologian of his generation. While he claimed to be an Edwardsian Calvinist, very few people believed him. This book attempts to understand how Taylor and his associates could have counted themselves Edwardsians. In the process, it explores what it meant to be an Edwardsian minister and intellectual in the 19th century.

The foreign missionary movement of the early 19th century grew out of the efforts of churches in New England to deal with the changes then taking place in society. The erosion of traditional institutional structures and social values plus the rise of Unitarianism threatened the destruction of the traditional faith. Mr. Andrew holds that the Congregational clergy used foreign missions not only to implant New England culture in heathen lands but also to awaken a sense of community at home.
